University Students Drop Their Jeans For A Good Cause

Cotton. From Blue to Green.™ Encourages Denim Recycling on University Campuses This Fall

New York, NY – Cotton Incorporated will launch the Cotton. From Blue to Green.™ denim recycling program on college campuses again this fall as a call to action to recycle old denim and give it a “new life” by converting it into natural cotton fiber insulation. The program is a direct appeal to the demographic and will encourage coeds to drop their jeans for a good cause.

The Cotton. From Blue to Green.™ denim recycling program will be at the following schools this fall: University of Kentucky, Texas Tech, Simmons College, and the Fashion Institute of Design and Merchandising (FIDM) in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Irvine and San Diego.

“The Cotton. From Blue to Green.™ denim recycling program is a great way to speak to college students about cotton, specifically denim, and generate awareness among their peers about its ability to be recycled and reused,” says Marissa Barlin, Spokesperson, Cotton Incorporated. “We know that young people today are eager to make a difference, and this is a unique way to help others in need, while making the environmentally-responsible decision to keep textiles out of landfills.”

Cotton Incorporated and Bonded Logic, the leading manufacturer in natural cotton fiber insulation, partnered for the 2006 inaugural launch of the Cotton. From Blue to Green.™ denim recycling program. The denim collected on college campuses is given new life when it is converted to UltraTouch™ Denim Insulation and provided to communities in need to assist with building efforts, often in areas affected by natural disasters.

In addition to working with students on college campuses, the denim recycling program continues to gain momentum by partnering with retailers, consumers and corporate responsibility programs throughout the nation. All denim collected through the Cotton. From Blue to Green.™ program is recycled into UltraTouch™ Denim Insulation, and a portion of this insulation, up to approximately 250,000 square feet, will be distributed in 2013 to communities in need.

To date, the Cotton. From Blue to Green.[™] program has received nearly 850,000 pieces of denim, resulting in over 1.7 million square feet of insulation. That's approximately 531 tons of denim diverted from landfills. And denim drives on campuses make a big impact! Over 100,000 pieces of denim have come directly from college denim drives. At each university, the denim recycling program encourages students to collect denim from the student population as well as from the surrounding community. The campus denim drive is a grassroots student-run campaign designed to educate campus communities about the natural, renewable and recyclable attributes of denim.

The program will be promoted on each campus via multiple channels, as well as online at www.CottonFromBlueToGreen.org with information about the campus denim drives and the process of recycling denim into insulation.

Cotton Incorporated is working with Sparks to execute the fall university Cotton. From Blue to Green.[™] denim recycling program.
